

The New Hampshire Office of the Consumer Advocate – located in the sweet little city of Concord, just an hour north of Boston – has openings for a staff attorney, a director of rates and markets, and a director of economics and finance. The Granite State is ground zero for so many of the epic struggles that implicate ratepayers these days – everything from offshore wind to hydrogen fuel to customer data access. Community Power Aggregation is about to sweep through New Hampshire, and the OCA will adapt and innovate accordingly.
